New Look for Campus Buildings

Renovations are under way on three campus buildings. At Aquinas Hall—shown above in an architectural rendering of the new exterior—the project will expand classroom availability, provide needed faculty office space and offer additional meeting/community space for students and faculty. The work in this building, which was dedicated in April 1966, also will increase space efficiency for the Information Technology and Accelerated Degree Program departments. Nearby, at the Hubert Campus Center, which opened in 1970, the renovation will provide expanded space for student and staff use with major enhancements to the north façade, Albertus bookstore and several offices. A new entryway with a window wall and a window wall for the bookstore open up vistas of the lower campus. Landscaping on the former softball field will improve views from the Mary A. and Louis F. Tagliatela Academic Center and create a natural earthen berm to shield the existing parking tiers. Renovations will continue in phases during the 2008–2009 academic year. Svigals + Partners, the architects for the Academic Center, which opened for classes in 2005, is the designer for the renovations.

College Inducts Athletics Hall of Fame Honorees

On Saturday evening October 11, as part of the Fall Fest weekend, Albertus inducted its first group of honorees into the Athletics Hall of Fame at a celebratory dinner held in the DeDominicis Dining Hall. Honored were the 1996 men's soccer team, winner of the Great Northeast Athletic Conference championship—Victor Alves, Donald Anderson, James Bernardo, Shane Bryan, William “Casey” Cahoon, Victor Crespo, Vincent DeStefanis, Gabriel DeMelo, Edward Easter, Christopher Everone, John Gilbey, Kevin Guarino, Jason Kelly, Jay Kopchinski, Matthew Monroy, Daniel O'Connor and Joseph Quinn; George Bedocs, founder of the men's soccer team and AMC coach for 15 years; Liz Lacroix Nawrocki, all-time leading scorer in women's basketball history at the College with 1,557 career points; Karen Lobasz Scheuler, four-year starter at point guard position who scored 1,457 points during her career; and Joe Tonelli, former baseball coach, former athletics director and the first Albertus coach to bring a team into an NCAA tournament. The Athletics Hall of Fame wall of honor in the College's Cosgrove, Marcus, Messer Athletic Center features plaques noting achievements of the inductees.

Joe Walsh, commissioner of the Great Northeast Athletic Conference, gave the keynote address; Jennifer Pacelli '01, '05 MSM, '06 MBA, director of athletics, presented the honorees. (See back page for a photo of the inaugural class of the Athletics Hall of Fame; for more on Fall Fest, see pages 6–7.)

- American Executive magazine ran a Corporate Spotlight article on President Julia M. McNamara and the College in its October issue. “Small College, Big Approach” chronicles the history of Albertus from its founding in 1925 to its current mix of traditional and adult students in undergraduate and graduate programs. The article notes that by “serving the underserved and maintaining a small but healthy size, this liberal arts college is making waves in New England.”
- In celebration of Constitution Day, the College on September 22 welcomed Dr. Laura Wittern-Keller of the University of Albany, who spoke on “The Constitution, Free Expression, and Film Viewing in the United States.” She is the author of the recently-published “Freedom of the Screen: Legal Challenges to State Film Censorship” and co-author of “The Miracle Case: Film Censorship and the Supreme Court,” published in October.
- This fall, Albertus sponsored a competition for original short films, inviting filmmakers to submit works that explore the impact of the U.S. Constitution and the Bill of Rights on the lives of people living in the country today. Winners are: “Crossing Numbers” by Abel Gonzalez, an exploration of illegal immigrants along the U.S.-Mexican border, first place; “The Conversation” by Joel Callaway—a student in the Accelerated Degree Program—a conversation about the Constitution, second place; and “Grand Wheel” by Gavin Heffernan, a look at the Peace Movement in the United States, third place.
- On Saturday, November 15—the Feast of St. Albert—the Office of Admissions hosted the College’s annual open house for prospective students. More than 200 high schoolers and their families attended the event, which included brunch and welcoming remarks, faculty and department exhibits in the Tagliatela Academic Center. Staff members were on hand to provide admission and financial aid information, and student guides conducted tours of the campus.
- Crystal Schrade, a student in the College’s Master of Arts in Art Therapy program—the only one in Connecticut—has won the Myra Levick Scholarship from the American Art Therapy Association. She is one of five students in the nation to receive this prestigious award. In November she attended the Association’s annual conference in Cleveland.
- The department of Biology/Chemistry and the AMC Science Club co-hosted a talk by Kenneth Zercie, assistant director of the Connecticut Forensic Laboratory, on October 31. His presentation was “An Overview of Forensic Science in the Real World.” The Connecticut Forensic Laboratory was founded by Dr. Henry C. Lee, internationally known forensic scientist who received an honorary degree from Albertus in 2007.
- Jennifer Pacelli ’01, ’05 MSM, ’06 MBA, director of athletics at Albertus and a member of the Greater New Haven Chamber of Commerce’s Sports Council, recently spoke to Council members on “Sports Marketing in the New Haven Area.” She shared best practices from sports councils across the country with members of the New Haven group, which will be looking at ways to apply these successful strategies to existing sports events in the area.

Hubbard Speaks on St. Dominic

Robert Hubbard, associate professor of computer information systems, spent two weeks this summer in Fanjeaux, France, taking part in a study program on the life of St. Dominic, who lived there from 1206 to 1215. Thirty faculty members, students and staff from 10 Dominican colleges and universities participated in discussion groups that focused on contemporary challenges to the Dominican identity and how Dominic might have handled today’s social justice issues. Hubbard, the first person from Albertus to attend the program, shared his experiences with the College community in October.

Lucy Scillia '48

A Living Treasure

PROFILE

For 16 years, Lucy Scillia has been a dedicated volunteer. Name a committee or board in her hometown of Orange, Connecticut, and chances are she has served on it. Prior to retirement in 1992, she had spent most of a long career as a librarian and library administrator for the Milford school system.

"I couldn't face having nothing to do each day," she says. "I needed something to occupy my mind and, perhaps, be challenged by some new experiences." So she asked the librarian who held her former position whether volunteer help one morning a week in the library would be welcome. The offer was quickly accepted. "I spent my time processing the books that she did not have time to do," she recalls. "Computers were just beginning to have a vital role in libraries, and I catalogued books electronically for several years."

Her next project stemmed from a chance meeting with the principal of the Sacred Heart/St. Peter's elementary school in New Haven. "I asked about the library and she invited me to see for myself. I found out that the library was nothing more than a dream at the time—piles of books on the floor of what was once an auditorium." Scillia spent a year setting up the library and training volunteers, and because there was no computer, she catalogued books "the old-fashioned way—by a card catalogue."

After 10 years of volunteering twice a week at two schools, she was ready for something new and offered to read to youngsters in her parish's Pre-School. "I had no experience working with little ones, but it did turn out to be fun, and 14 years later I'm still there."

Last year, Scillia became a student once again: she was selected for the Town of Orange's Senior Leadership Program. Attending nine day-long sessions over nine months, she learned about the town's history and economic development, legislative advocacy, communications skills and team-building. Participants also formed teams to identify, problem-solve and take action on local issues such as setting up a computer center for seniors and creating a senior resource center.

"My team worked on an intergenerational literacy program, matching 5th and 6th graders with senior citizens. Students read to the seniors, play word games and chess with them. When I joined the Leadership program, my goal was to do something for one of my favorite causes—children's literacy. Our program is continuing this year because it has been so successful," she says.

Earlier this year, Orange named Scillia one of the town's Living Treasures for her years of commitment to volunteer work. "This is an overwhelming honor for me. There are so many people in our town who are worthy of that title that I still cannot believe I was even nominated."

The list of Scillia's community commitments is very long, most reflecting her lifelong love of books and reading. "Reading is the most important skill that leads to success and enjoyment in life. It needs to be developed into and beyond adulthood. My entire working life involved books and their value, and I am happy to continue to be involved," she says. At 81, this is a volunteer who shows no sign of slowing down.

Scillia is a three-term member of the Library Commission and liaison to the Friends of the Library; and a volunteer for the Friends of the Library, Adopt-A-Reader, Senior Advisory Committee and other town groups. She is active, too, at Holy Infant Church, serving as a leader of the Bible Study class and reader at the Children's Summer Bible Camp, member of the social ministry and other committees.

In 2006, she and her sister Grace received the Outstanding Service Award established by the Alpha Kappa State, the Connecticut Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma Society International. The award is given to volunteers who are devoted to children in Connecticut.

Lucy Scillia says her "goal in life has always been to touch the lives of children, to enrich them, and promote a love of reading and the arts," and she has done just that.

In October, Tim Quinn '88 of Boca Raton, Florida, received Hollywood's Makeup Artist of the Year Award, presented by Hollywood Life Magazine at the Pacific Coast Center. The national creative director and celebrity makeup artist for Giorgio Armani Beauty, he joined the Armani team with the launch of the brand in September 2001. Since then he has traveled internationally hosting special events, training and promoting the beauty line.

Featured as one of the "25 Beauty Stars" in W magazine, Quinn has worked backstage at the Academy Awards, Golden Globes and ESPY shows. He has created makeup for many celebrities including Glenn Close, Victoria Beckham, Kim Cattrall, Minnie Driver and Gwen Stefani.

Cristina Mancini Harter '73 The Corporate Life

PROFILE

Promotions, lateral moves, stretch assignments—the corporate world offers lots of career opportunities. At her recent retirement dinner, Cristina Harter ticked off the statistics of a 35-year career at General Electric: worked for 33 GE managers, averaging 13 months per manager; had 20 jobs, averaging 21 months per position; worked in 4 of the 6 GE businesses plus corporate; and had several international assignments. Along the way, she led a 40,000-member global employee volunteer organization and was one of the creators of GE's only 501c(3) charity, the GE Community Foundation.

Is there a favorite job in all those assignments? Given Harter's drive and commitment, her favorite is one she describes as "grueling work" and the "hardest job I ever had, but certainly the most rewarding." The assignment: working as one of three directors responsible for financing power plants in underdeveloped parts of the world.

The GE Power Funding Corporation, she explains, helps GE Energy customers secure financing from commercial banks, export credit agencies—the U.S. Export-Import Bank, for example—and multilateral and bilateral financing institutions such as World Bank and Inter-Monetary Fund.

Harter set up multi-million dollar Power Funding projects in the Czech Republic, Kazakhstan, Turkmenistan, Tunisia, Italy, Spain and India. During that four-year assignment, she averaged 26 transatlantic trips per year.

Another favorite assignment was one she had right after graduating from GE's Financial Management Program. "I was an analyst in GE's Corporate Consulting Group and responsible for providing cash flow analysis for new ventures and acquisitions. I worked with some of the best minds GE had at the time. Among the businesses we created were GE Robotics and GE Fanuc, a joint venture with GE and Fanuc of Japan for control systems for manufacturing processes."

Her final GE job has been managing director and strategic marketing leader for the Capital Marketing Group in GE Capital Solutions. This line of business provides financing for medium-to-large companies interested in making capital expenditures to grow or expand.

After graduating from Albertus, with a double major in math and economics, Harter received her M.B.A.—on full fellowship—from Union College in Schenectady, New York. "Schenectady is a GE town," she says, "and when I was interviewing for jobs shortly before graduation, GE was the logical choice." It was also a family tradition: her parents were longtime employees. She interviewed for all of GE's management training programs and chose finance. "That was the right choice for me."

Another right choice was Albertus. When Harter sent out requests for information as a high school junior, the response from Albertus impressed her, and the College made it to her short list, which also included Mount Holyoke, Mount St. Vincent, Manhattanville and others. "My dad took me to visit all the schools on my short list," she remembers. "I loved the Albertus campus, the people, the academics... and my dad loved the big high wall around the main campus." Her sister, Geri Mancini, graduated from Albertus in 1975.

In retirement, Harter is planning to pursue opportunities in the not-for-profit world. "I've always volunteered—in high school, at Albertus, at GE. I think the one common thread for me has been children, children and education."

She and her husband, John, a lawyer, have been involved in sending books and computers to a small village in Ghana called Tasmi Peiki. "John helped build the village church. Seeing photos from his trip, I couldn't get the kids out of my mind. I asked GE for some used laptops and, along with a group of GE professionals, we modified the hardware and software so the children of Tasmi Peiki could use them," she says.

Several years ago, Harter was featured in the chapter on GE in "Heroes After Hours: Extraordinary Acts of Employee Volunteerism." Summing up her countless volunteer efforts, she said "I can't solve all the problems of the world, but I try to make a difference in whatever way I can by giving back some of the love and compassion that people have given to me in my life. The world really can be a better place if we can each just do our little bit to make a difference."

Bowman and Manafort Elected New Alumni Trustees

Bowman

Manafort

Betsy Bowman '80, far left, of Westport, Connecticut, and Tabitha Wazorko Manafort '94 of Plainville, Connecticut, have been elected by the College's Board of Trustees to serve three-year terms as Alumni Trustees.

Bowman received a master's degree through the Stern School of Business Executive M.B.A. Program at New York University, and has held corporate management positions at Price Waterhouse and the Chase Manhattan Bank.

In 1999, she moved from New York City to Westport, where she became involved with non-profit organizations. She is now chief development officer at Blythedale Children's Hospital in Westchester County, responsible for all fundraising, including a $70 million capital campaign, public relations and community relations.

Bowman says, "For years, I have been thinking about how I might give back to Albertus, a place that got me started on my incredible journey...I look forward to returning to campus and meeting with today's faculty and students."

Manafort received a master's degree in secondary education from Central Connecticut State University. For ten years she taught and coached at private schools, and was also an education consultant. She was a member of the College's Advisory Panel on Education Programs. Today she runs her own construction business, building and rehabilitating houses. Manafort is a board member of the Plainville Food Pantry and the Plainville Board of Education. She also is a director of The Community Foundation of Greater New Britain and serves on its scholarship committee.

"Albertus holds a special place in my heart, and I am proud to call it my alma mater. I am grateful, once again, to be an active member of the Albertus Magnus community," says Manafort.

Why I Give

I haven't always contributed to the Albertus Annual Fund. It took a while—several years, I think—before I gave serious thought to the importance of supporting the College. As I look back, I remember my attitude as being something like “Mom and Dad struggled to put me, the oldest of six, through college. Dad was working three jobs and my mother was a teacher, and I had a couple of assistanceships each year—so why was I expected to pay more money after I had graduated?”

A few years, and a much-needed increase in understanding of a college's financial reality, helped me to think differently. Partly, I think, my changed attitude came from attending reunions—reconnecting with some of the classmates who had meant so much to me and remembering the place Albertus had held in my life during those four wonderful years. It finally hit me that the College depended on the support of alumnae for survival—and I certainly wanted the College to survive! I began to give—not a lot, but participation nevertheless—and was fortunate to obtain matching gifts from The Hartford Financial Services Company, where I've worked (42 years full-time and the last four years part-time) since graduation.

If each of us could contribute even a little to Albertus, what a difference we could make!

Larry Cole '97

PROFILE

Larry Cole retired from AT&T in 2007 after a 35-year career in the telecommunications industry. At the time he was associate director of public safety, managing Connecticut's statewide E9-1-1 emergency system.

He was interested in volunteering, but had not yet found an opportunity he felt was a match, an opportunity that "hooked" him. "I knew I wanted to work with people with disabilities because both my parents were disabled," he says. One day he came across an article in the local paper about High Hopes Therapeutic Riding, Inc., which was founded in 1974 and by 1990 had built a permanent, full-service therapeutic center in Old Lyme, Connecticut.

The High Hopes program is specifically designed to improve the lives of people with cognitive, physical and emotional disabilities through the benefits of therapeutic horseback riding. "The article described the participants the center helped and how a majority of the success is due to volunteerism," says Cole. Checking out the organization on-line, he realized he had found his opportunity and was "hooked."

Cole took a volunteer training session and began working at the center in September 2007. High Hopes serves more than 220 participants each week and also is approved to train therapeutic riding instructors who come to Old Lyme from around the world. Nearly 30 years ago, High Hopes was one of the first therapeutic riding centers in the country to be accredited by the North American Riding for the Handicapped Association.

One challenge Cole faced when starting out as a High Hopes volunteer was that he had no experience with horses. "I've learned that horses have their own personalities—what they like and, more importantly, what they dislike. If you do something they do not like, believe me, they will let you know."

For the past fall riding season, Cole committed to leading three classes one day a week; he also is on the call-list to fill in for other volunteers. As a leader, he gets the participant's horse saddled and bridled before class, then assists the rider in completing lessons determined by the High Hopes instructor. "Leaders give the rider a comfort zone as we typically work with the same riders over a period of time," he explains. "Staff can count on us to be a stabilizing influence. I've been with the same rider for the past year, and we have formed a very special bond."

"High Hopes is a very special place. The ability to have a positive influence with riders who have different challenges and abilities is very rewarding. My 'rule' is that a rider has to smile. It may take weeks to cajole the rider, even with my sense of humor, but the greatest reward is seeing that grin. You can be having a bad day, but when you walk through the doors and see your riders, it all goes away."

Cole's wife, Kathy, is also a volunteer at High Hopes, working behind-the-scenes on the center's data base, Web site and volunteer recruitment. During the past 12 months, more than 600 volunteers have logged over 29,500 hours at High Hopes.

Larry Cole came to Albertus as an adult student in the New Dimensions program. "It was very important to me personally and professionally to complete my studies and obtain my degree. I'm very proud to be the first in my immediate family to have graduated with a four-year degree, and to be the first student from the program to give remarks at the College's Laurel night ceremonies," he says.

New York Times Reviews Book by Albertus Alumnus

"The Big Splash," a first novel by Jack D. Ferraiolo '94 was released this fall and favorably reviewed in the October 12 issue of the New York Times Book Review. The young adult novel is a parody of detective stories by Raymond Chandler, Dashiell Hammett and other writers. Rich Cohen, the reviewer, said that the "entertaining and thrilling" novel is marked "by twists and turns, and the writing is cynical and tough, riddled with the sort of hard-boiled jargon you expect from a B movie."

Ferraiolo is the developer, writer and director of WordGirl animated shorts for PBS, and head writer for the half-hour series based on those shorts. His work on "O'Grady," an animated film, brought him a co-nomination for an Annie Award from the International Animated Film Society.
